SCENE SIX BY HENREDON: A FRESH, EDGY APPROACH TO CLASSIC SOPHISTICATION

HIGH POINT, NC (October 21, 2011) – Henredon, famous for setting the style direction for the entire industry, ushers in a new era in classic, sophisticated furnishings with SCENE SIX, currently debuting at the High Point Market.

Believing that classic pieces do not have to be totally reinvented, Henredon designers took elements of early 20th century styling, mixed them with machine age details, and created a collection that is fresh and edgy, but not over the edge.

“SCENE SIX will appeal to those who like tradition, but don’t want their parents’ 18th century furniture,” said Dan Bradley, Henredon President.

Todd Sessa, Henredon Vice-President of Design and Merchandising, who spearheaded the design project, agrees. “We took classic forms that are neither too traditional nor too modern and fused them with machine age elements including nickel plated hardware and knurled components. These are details that sophisticates of any age will appreciate.”

For inspiration, Henredon turned to the great works of 20th century designers and architects. Like many of those forms, SCENE SIX designs are clean lined, geometric in form, down-to-earth in scaling, and rely on fine veneering and a rich finish for design interest. The focus is squarely on unity, harmony, simplicity and respect for the nature of materials.

Cathedral cut American walnut veneers with mahogany solids are the woods of choice. The finish is reflective and deep with a beautiful medium brown tone; and the nickel plated hardware is executed at the level of fine jewelry.

One of the machine age elements that sets SCENE SIX apart is knurling (machining) found in many of the hardware details. All such hardware is first machined, then nickel plated, which gives both a jewelry appearance as well as an industrial look. Knobs and collars are similarly treated.

Another jewelry reference can be found in the round dining table. According to Sessa, the table, with its glass top over walnut and four prominent prongs, resembles one of Elizabeth Taylor's bigger-than-life diamond solitaires. On the table base are flat "rivets," which add another industrial element.

The Sutton Place sectional and matching chair, created especially for SCENE SIX, also take style cues from the past. The tailored and clean profiles sport back pillows with a double baffle treatment reminiscent of details found in vintage automobiles.

Because SCENE SIX melds memories of modernism with highly livable styles of today, it blends easily with both antique and contemporary furnishings. Henredon recognizes the need for classic pieces that can complement today's eclectic décor. With comfort, elegance, and simplicity in mind, SCENE SIX answers this need.

Highlights of the collection:

7901-40 Round Cocktail Table – This beauty was inspired by a mid-century French modern design. Nickel plated accents add sparkling sophistication to the sleek form.

7900-20 Round Dining Table – The matched walnut top on this distinctive table is adorned with an in-set nickel plated band held in place by rivets; nickel plated fillets adorn the pedestal base.

7900-49 Bibliothèque – Nickel plated fillets add design dimension to this striking bookcase. Glass inserts in wooden framed shelves allow for lighted display. Note the subtle wooden flange at the top of the piece.

7901-04 Metal Mirror – Echoes of Art Deco are recalled in the medallion at the bottom of this silvery beveled mirror.

7900-05 Chest – Drawer knobs lined up in precise double-breasted symmetry give this signature piece a certain regimented air. With a practical glass top overlay, the chest can double as a bar. Similar styling is carried through to double dresser, night stand and server.

7900-08 Bench – Solid architectural lines and metal rivets give this design its machine age aura. Perfect for any room in the home.
